We have just finished celebrating Thanksgiving and you might have kicked off the holiday shopping season by hitting the malls and internet to take advantage of the deals offered on Black Friday and Cyber Monday! But the fun isn't over!

Today, 11/29/2016 is #GivingTuesday which kicks off the charitable season, when many focus on their holiday and end-of-year giving. I am participating in the Foundation for Peripheral Neuropathy's #GivingTuesday: Building Awareness- Giving Hope event. The Foundation for Peripheral Neuropathy (FPN) is encouraging me to share my story of living with peripheral neuropathy (PN) in order to increase awareness of PN in the hope that we may help all who suffer from the disease live better. We want to build awareness and give hope.

Did you know I had PN?

Tell your story here

I'm not writing to you to complain. This is my way of making a difference. On #GivingTuesday I want people to learn what peripheral neuropathy is, how many people it afflicts and just how life-changing it can be for them. With that knowledge I hope more people will understand why it's so important for FPN to provide resources that educate and inform patients, doctors and caretakers about PN and to double their efforts to find a cure.

I support The Foundation for Peripheral Neuropathy. If you would like to participate in #GivingTuesday by giving to FPN, just follow this link: <https://www.foundationforpn.org/make-a-difference/>

Thanks for listening!
